How we use cookies

A cookie is a small file which asks permission to be placed on your computer's hard drive. Once you agree, the file is added and the cookie helps site owners to analyse web traffic. The file can also store information inputted by the user on said site. Cookies allow web applications to respond to you as an individual. The web application can tailor its operations to your needs, likes and dislikes by gathering and remembering information about your preferences.

We use analytics cookies to identify which pages of our website are used most often. This helps us improve our website to match the needs of our customers. We use this information for statistical analysis purposes only, and the information gathered does not comprise any personally identifiable information.

In summary, cookies help us provide you with improved user experience by enabling us to monitor which pages you find useful, and those you do not. A cookie in no way gives us access to your computer or any information about you, other than the data you choose to share with us.

You can choose to accept or decline cookies. Most web browsers automatically accept cookies, but you can usually modify your browser settings to deny cookies if preferred. This may however, prevent you from taking full advantage of our website.

Links to other websites

Our website may contain links to other websites of interest. You should note we do not have any control over external websites. Therefore, we cannot be held responsible for the protection or privacy of any information you provide while using such sites – they are not governed by this privacy statement. You should exercise caution and look at the privacy statement applicable to each website in question.

Controlling your personal information

You may choose to restrict the collection or use of your personal information in the following ways:

If you have previously agreed to us using your personal information for direct marketing purposes, you may change your mind at any time by writing to or emailing us at info@matchingbrick.co.uk

We will not sell, distribute or lease your personal information to third parties unless we have your permission, or are required by law to do so. We may use your personal information to send you promotional material from third parties we think you may find interesting, but only if you tell us you wish this to happen.

You may request full details regarding the personal information Matching Brick, part of the Brickability Group PLC holds about you, under the Data Protection Act 1998. A small fee will be payable.
